

As a recent amateur radio licensee, I am opposed to the the BPL initiative. With cable modems and ADSL lines available from the cable companies and telephone companies, not to mention satellite broadband, there is enough competition to keep prices low. Clear frequencies for HAM's are essential for natural disaster response and amateur radio could be important in the event of terrorist attacks on the U.S.